The entire vested choir entered singing, "Oh. Perfect Love," with Mr. MacCallum as the organ, and Sherrad Mengel as crucifer, and marched to the chancel, where they stood to await the bridal party.

The groom and best man, Maury Kemp, a cousin of the bride, entered from the vestry room door, while the choir sang the hymn version of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was most impressive. The ushers entered from the front, two by two, They were Charles and Lamar Davis, Page Kemp, Dr. Hugh S. White, Dr. Frank Lynch and W. D. Wise. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Glen Adams, who entered next and was followed by the bride on the arm of ladge James M. Goggin, who gave her in marriage.

The Impressive ring service was used, the first part of the service being performed at the chancel, while the ministerial blessing was given at the

The bride wore a bandsome white crepe de chine gowns trimmed in Venetian lace. The bodice was made decollete and was filled in with white maline. The train was square effect and the long vell which was also of the Venetian lace, was worn in hood effect with a coronet of orange blossoms. The only jewelry worn by the bride was a cameo brooch, an heirloom. She carried an immense round bouquet of white daisles, tied with white maline. The maild of honor wore a lace gown with fouches of yellow and a large picture hat of white lace trimmed with yellow plumes. The bedice of the gown was trimmed with tlay pleatings of yellow plumes. The bedice of the gown was shaded from a deep yellow to a lighter shade as the color reached the length of the skirt. Lace gracefully fell from the left shoulder to the edge of the skirt. Miss Adams carried a large bouquet of yellow roses.

Mrs. E. G. Adams, mother of the bride, wore a beautiful white mull gown and white hat.

As the wedding party left the church Mendelasohn's wedding march was played and the "Melody in F," with Mr. MacCallum at the organ.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bride and groom left for San Antonio and Waco, where they will spend a few days before going to their future home in Bremond. Texas, where the groom is a prominent young physician.

Doctor Tells How to Shed Bad Complexion

We cannot restore degenerated fa-cial tiesue any more than we can re-store a lost limb. It is useless to at-tempt to convert a worn-out complex-ion into a new one. The rational pre-cedure is to remove the camplexion cedure is to remove the camplexion instead—remove the devitalized cuticle. Not by surgical means, however, as the underlying cutis is too thin, too tender, to withistand immediate exposure. Applying ordinary mercellized wax will gradually absorb the offending cuticle. By degrees, a new, youthful skin appears, a skin soft and delicately tinted as a rose petal.

The palms were placed at either side of the room, some of them being so tall as to form a bower and archway above the heads of the bride and groom. From the four corners of the room, ferns were gracefully hung and caught at the chandelier above. Boquets of pink and white sweet peas were interspersed through the palms and ferns, and the mantel piece was banked with the ferns and flowers. In the living room a table, holding the bride's cake, was decorated in ferns and sweet peas.

Miss Carrie Seddon, sister of the bride was maid of honor and Frank Farrell was best man. Previous to the ceremony, H. L. Hifrey sang "Oh Faic. Oh Sweet, Oh Holty," and was accompanied on the piano by his sister, Miss Laia Hifrey. As the opening strains of Lohengrin's wedding march week heard, little Rath Allis Orndorff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Orndorff, entered, carrying a boquet of Easter lilies, one of which held the wedding ring. Then followed the maid of honor and then the bride, on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the improvised altar by the groom and his best man. The ring ceremony was used, and the bride and groom knell at the close of the ceremony upon a white satin cushion for the minister's blessing.
